That Judicial Convention Don't Nominate.

Special to THE EVENING TELEGRAPH.

FREESPORT, May 25, 3 p. m.

There were thirty delegates present at the judicial convention assembled here this afternoon.

A resolution has just passed against making a nomination and denouncing partisan nominations for judges of the Circuit Court.

—That Fake insisted that he was not a fakir. Probably he was one of those things we read about, a blessing in disguise. Some of the suckers who use his tooth paste can tell.

—The nonsense which has filled the papers regarding the probability of a naval engagement between the Chilean insurgent and the American war ships may be understood when we remember that the Pacific Ocean is something larger than a millpond, and two such vessels as Charleston and Itata might sail around it for several years without sighting each other.

—The man here selling tooth paste was much disturbed on account of our criticisms upon his decker with suckers who purchased his acids; he going so far as to deny that he is a "fakir." He uttered bitter invectives against THE TELEGRAPH that he should be classed as a fakir; and we are again reminded that this paper has long experienced the abuse of people who hesitate not in swindling their fellow men. This one of whom we now speak is a stranger here and he probably will not remain with us to learn a thing or two. Perhaps it is well and wise man has said: Wisdom is a gift which every one does not possess; but by a wise dispensation of Providence those who do not possess it are not aware of the fact, so that their lack of wit causes them no unhappiness.

—George F. Read will leave Dixon in a few days and in this paper advertises his horse and buggy for sale. Mr. Read has resigned his position in the Riverside shoe factory to accept a similar position in a large Chicago establishment. He will leave on Thursday and his family will follow in a few days. The many friends they have made here will regret their departure.

—Citizens should remember that there is to be a meeting at the Armory Hall to-morrow evening for the purpose of making arrangements to celebrate the Fourth and decide upon a programme for the glorious day. The boys have now on the subscription over four hundred dollars secured, and they are still pushing the paper. It is a patriotic move. Let the great American Eagle scream.

—The "Turn of the Tide," a nautical drama in three acts will be presented at College Chapel to-morrow evening. The following persons taking the characters in the play: V. C. Smith, A. Richards, George E. Eckert, J. M. Barclay, M. Rothleitner, F. E. Leake, Dana C. Johnson, Marcia Smith, Gertrude Hatch, Katie M. Knapp and Hattie Connard. The entertainment is given under the auspices of the Vespera Literary Society.

—Fight Their Battles O'er. The Thirteenth Illinois regiment will hold their reunion in this city to-morrow, and as may be seen by our paper many of the "boys" have arrived. The morning hours will be spent at the Nachusa house for registering names and renewing acquaintances. A business meeting will be held at G. A. R. Hall, Opera Block, at one o'clock in the afternoon.

—The grand banquet, or camp fire, will be held at the Nachusa House at seven o'clock, in the evening, and here the Ladies Quartet will sing. Street music for the parade and during the day and evening will be furnished by the Citizens Band.

—The old Thirteenth is a great favorite here, and Dixon is always spoken of by the soldiers in kindness. THE TELEGRAPH hopes that they will have their usual pleasant reunion.

—One of the leading spirits of all these occasions will not be here and his genial greeting will be missed by every one of them.

DO YOU STOP TO THINK?

When you are about to buy a bill of drugs, paints, oils, or wall paper, where you can do the best, or do you from habit drop into the old place which may be a little more convenient. If you go to a store from force of habit then you are pretty sure to pay high prices for simply an average quality of goods, if you stop to think how cheap your neighbor bought the best and freshest goods at the popular drug store, 3 doors north of post office.

W. D. DUFFIN,
Druggist, Dixon, Ill.

The Dixon Anglo-Swiss Milk Condensing Factory is the largest and most complete institution of its kind in the world. One hundred and twenty people are now regularly employed there.

The milk from 3,000 cows, kept within six miles of Dixon, is taken daily at this factory. This number will probably be doubled within the next year or two, necessitating the employment of many more people.

This is a great concern, managed by liberal, kind hearted people, and is doing wonders for this city. The shipment of a thousand cases of milk in a day is not an unusual occurrence.

Improved machinery is being placed in the factory every few days.

Is it any wonder that Dixon is steadily growing and the value of property increasing?

All those who intend buying property are cordially invited to call at my office and be shown the best bargains to be had in the city.

NEWTON'S BELIEF.

The Nicene Creed of the Church's 'Charter of Liberty.'

ALSO THE SUM OF HIS OWN FAITH.

An Ingenious Argument Proving That the Council of Nice Promulgated the "Broadest" Standard of Faith in Existence—Its Rejection Disloyalty to the Church—The Presbyterians Go to Ann Arbor and Accept McMillan's Note—Gift to the Baptists—Vineyard Notes.

NEW YORK, May 25.—The Rev. R. Heber Newton, rector of All Souls' Protestant Episcopal church, who is charged with holding heretical views and with preaching heretical doctrines, and especially with denying the immaculate conception of the Saviour and the resurrection of his body after three days, took occasion yesterday morning to answer his accusers in a sermon on the Nicene creed. He said the Nicene creed was the charter of the church's liberty, when "rightly understood." It and the Apostles' creed were spoken of as the Catholic creeds accepted by the church at large. "The Greek church, the Church of Rome, the Church of England, and our own church alike hold fast to them."

Must Believe the Nicene Creed.
"The Nicene creed is a charter of liberty. It frees us from nine-tenths of the burning questions with which Protestantism is on fire to-day. What the Nicene creed affirms, however, is bound upon every loyal child of the church. To deny the affirmation of that creed is to be disloyal. To accept loyally the church's teaching what one's own individual mind fails to affirm is a thoroughly honest attitude."

Not So the Thirty-nine Articles.
The American church at first dropped the Thirty-nine Articles; but later accepted them under constraint—in order to obtain Episcopal consecration from England. "The Thirty-nine Articles were put forth in the reformation era, not as a substitute for the two great Catholic creeds, but as an interpretation of them in the thought current at the time. Other reform churches dropped the great Catholic creeds and substituted confessions of faith, then for the first time drawn up. The Church of England never intended to place the Thirty-nine Articles in any such position. She never ordered them to be read or sung in the churches."

Too Broad Even for Newton.
"By general consent the articles have no binding obligation upon our thought to-day. Pressed as a creed they are self-destructive. They cover all schools of thought, and shield none. Every opinion can find shelter beneath them. No opinion can rest undisturbed within them. They do not even exclude Romanism, as Dr. Newman showed. All schools of opinion agree practically in this view of the articles. They are a foreign substance which has become encysted in the church. This being the state of the case, see how much is ruled out from the essentials of faith in the Protestant Episcopal church."

A Blast at Calvinism.
"The Thirty-nine Articles stand for that secondary body of reformation theology popularly known as Calvinism, which is the irritating cause of all the disturbances in the church to-day. Accepted consciously by a large part of the Protestant Christianity, the human mind is in revolt against it, that ever lessening number of men excepted whose solid comfort to-day is that they are not to be Calvinized the Westminster confession. Accepted unconsciously by a large part of our own church, the opinions which it seems to necessitate are in violent reaction against the liberty which the great creeds ordain in our church."

The Mistake Some Men Make.
"The trouble with the good men who are intent on forcing a conflict in our church is simply that they mistake the mass of thought which has grown up within the church and the great creeds for living parts of the creed themselves. This simple distinction would clear the whole atmosphere to-day. Nothing is to be demanded of a clergyman in our church save loyalty to the great Catholic creeds. Orthodoxy is to be tested by no other standard than those found in the creeds. The thought of laymen need not concern itself with any doctrine not embodied in those creeds. What a vast emancipation the recognition of this catholic truth would work among us. Scarcely a doctrine which is in dispute in the churches around us can furnish a proper ground for dispute in our roomy church."

DEFINING THE NICENE CREED.
A Very Easy Thing to Believe If You Only Know How.
"The only affirmation in the Nicene creed is the large, elastic declaration 'I believe in one Catholic and apostolic church.' Nothing beyond this is to be demanded of anybody as a matter of faith. What must we believe concerning the Bible? Nothing beyond that simple declaration of the Nicene creed, 'who spake by the prophets.' You may believe it literally, said the doctor, or take a 'more reasonable' view. What does the church bid us believe concerning the story of creation? Nothing beyond the simple declaration, 'I believe in one God, the Father Almighty, maker of heaven and earth, and of all things visible and invisible.' You are equally free to read the story in Genesis as a literal, prosaic bit of history or as a parable."

Atonement and Future Punishment.
After saying that the church does not command us to believe anything whatever as regards the origin of evil or predestination and election, Dr. Newton said: "What does the church teach us to believe concerning the atonement? Only that which is contained in the simple, unambiguous language of our creed—'Who for us men and for our redemption, came down from heaven.' What does the church order us to believe concerning future punishment? Nothing that is not contained in the simple undogmatic statement of the creed—'He shall come again with glory to judge both the quick and the dead.' The reality of a divine judgment of men—this and this alone is part of our faith."

Resurrection of the Dead.
"What does our church compel us to believe concerning the resurrection? This and this alone—'and I look for the resurrection of the dead.' The Apostles' creed is to be interpreted by the Nicene creed. The phrase in the Apostles' creed—'The resurrection of the body'—is then interpreted by the larger and more elastic phrase of the Nicene creed—'the resurrection of the dead.' You are free to interpret this in the most literal sense of the body laid away in the grave, if it so helps you. You are free to interpret it in the largest sense which most men must read it, if they believe it at all." Of the sacraments the only thing to believe in was one baptism, and belief may be either in the rite itself or in the spiritual grace.

The Two Great Doctrines.
The doctor said that the two central doctrines were the trinity and the incarnation, the latter of which was assumed to be the most impractical of speculations, the most irrational of dogmas, the most narrowing form of faith. "The doctrine of the trinity is a purely philosophical formula, a metaphysical statement in interpretation of the mystery of the relation of the Divine Being to creation, which again, is a mystery of the nature of the Divine Being himself. To interpret this doctrine accurately is therefore wholly beyond the power of man. To interpret it in some way, as closely as possible to the historic meaning, discernible in the fathers and recognized through the church, is the duty of every clergyman."

The Doctor Defines the Trinity.
Dr. Newton defined the trinity in these words: "God is in all life. He is uniquely in Christ, as Christ is a unique man, a new order of creation, the nature in which God is to be enshrined. Jesus Christ is therefore a man filled with the dwelling God, God manifest in the flesh." He then went on to declare that the Nicene creed is reconciliation of Christianity with the historic religion of the past, with itself, with modern thought, with science, with all forms of religion to-day and the truth of the future. There would be no heretics if this creed was properly accepted.

Religion and Science.
There was no conflict between religion and science; the conflict is between theology and science. "It does not yet appear how the acceptance of scientific truth can be squared with the Westminster confession and the Heidelberg catechism. But what antagonism is there between the Nicene creed and science?"

CHURCHMEN IN COUNCIL.
Presbyterians Visit Ann Arbor—A Baptist Chapel Cnr.
ANN ARBOR, Mich., May 25.—Seven hundred commissioners and friends of the general assembly of the Presbyterian church of the United States, which is now in session at Detroit, arrived in this city Saturday to attend the formal presentation of McMillan's note to the Tappan Presbyterian association by Senator James McMillan, of Detroit. The secretary of the association read a statement of the work of the association. The generous donor of the building is already and the formal presentation was made by his son, James H. McMillan, of Detroit. Rev. Wallace Radcliffe, of Detroit, accepted it in behalf of the association of which he is president.

Rockefeller's Unique Gift.
CINCINNATI, May 25.—The American Baptist Publication society met at the Grand Central station Saturday to attend the exercises of accepting from John D. Rockefeller a chapel car. The car is a plain coach sixty feet long by ten wide. One end is devoted to chapel purposes, the complete interior being finished in antique oak. In the rear of the altar an apartment similar to a stateroom in a sleeper is provided for cooking. The exercises consisted of speeches of donation and acceptance. The car was very much admired.

Thinks Americans Should Vote.
PITTSBURG, May 25.—Rev. J. K. McClurkin, of the Reformed Presbyterian Theological seminary, of Allegheny, has made public an announcement of his intention to resign the chair of theology and history in the institution. The reason is that seven young Reformed Presbyterian ministers had been suspended from the church for voting at a political election, and that they would probably be expelled. He says Americans should have the right to decide this question for themselves.

Twelve Thousand Sunday School People.
ST. LOUIS, May 25.—Twelve thousand young people, ranging in size and age from little toddlers scarcely able to march to young men and women, formed two May festival Sunday school parade, which took place Saturday morning and extended over three miles in length. It was a magnificent affair and a success in every way. The day was passed in games and amusements of various sorts.

SWEPT OVER THE FALLS.
Five Persons, Including Two Prominent Lumbermen, Lose Their Lives.
ST. PAUL, May 25.—A terrible accident occurred in the Kettle river near Sandstone, Minn., Friday evening. A boatload of men were crossing the river at dark and ventured too near the Kettle falls. The boat was caught in the rapids and whirled over the falls. Thomas Barney, of Chippewa Falls, and Charles A. McGraw, of Augusta, Me., both prominent lumbermen, and Swan Peterson were drowned. A boy named Whitesides and a man whose name could not be learned are missing and are probably drowned.

Ainsley Has No More Grudges.
CINCINNATI, May 25.—Word has been received here that John Ainsley, a noted desperado, was shot and killed by Constable Joe Eversole, of Clay county, Ky., last week. Ainsley had a grudge against Eversole, and went to his house to get revenge. Eversole saw him coming, and was prepared for a conflict. The first movement of Ainsley to draw his gun was met by a bullet from a Winchester rifle, which killed him instantly.

Disappeared $10,000 in Debt.
ALTON, Ill., May 25.—Peter Greenwood, treasurer of Wood River township, has mysteriously disappeared. He left home a week ago and has not been heard from since. Suspicion is aroused by his prolonged absence and an examination was made of his books. It was discovered that a shortage existed to the amount of $10,000, and that he had been running behind in his accounts for years.

Old Style Punishment in Delaware.
WILMINGTON, Del., May 25.—Nine men were whipped in the jail yard at New Castle Saturday. Seven of them received five lashes each and two ten lashes. Seven of the men were negroes. Two colored men who were whipped last week for stealing stood on a high platform Saturday for an attempt to kill the officer who arrested them.

WITH COLD STEEL.

A Hostile Meeting in Jackson Park, Chicago.

BLOOD DRAWN FROM BOTH FIGHTERS

Love for a Pretty Opera Singer the Cause of the Affair—A Man from Carlsbad Meets the Austrian Statesman's Nephew with Rapier—Both Belligerents "Pinned," the Assault at Arms Ending with a Fierce Encounter—A Genuine Romance.
CHICAGO, May 25.—Chicago was the scene of a genuine romance yesterday with all the essential features—a wealthy nobleman, a beautiful woman, a duel, and a mystery. Baron Rudolf Kalnoy, of Korospatak, a nephew of Count Kalnoy, of Vienna, arrived here a month ago, registering at the Richelieu merely as "Rudolph Kalnoy," of New York. While in America he became infatuated with Miss Mittie Atherton, a member of the Duff company. Miss Atherton has a voice full of melody, a faultless form, and a charming face, indicating a fascinatingly odd mixture of refinement, intelligence and bohemian independence. She led the baron a doleful life here and in other cities to which he followed her. She constantly kept before him the fact that she could never become his wife, as her heart was already given to one for whose sake she would shortly end her stage life.

One More Unfortunate.
Kalnoy finally became convinced of the truth of this and remained behind when the company left Chicago. Ten days ago, however, he made a flying trip to Louisville in one last effort to conquer the pretty actress. While there he seems to have met one of his numerous rivals, though not the successful one. Friday morning he returned to the Richelieu, having given up his original idea of following Miss Atherton from Louisville to Pittsburgh. The same night the man whom he encountered in the south dined with him at the Richelieu restaurant, the two seeming to take a morbid interest in together drowning their mutual sorrow. A too free indulgence in the wine ended in a quarrel in which the stranger was knocked down.

A Man, If He Is a Baron.
Manager Carlson, of the hotel, who had assumed a sort of guardianship over his young guest, found him calmly smoking a cigarette as he watched the prostrate form of the stranger. "Look, you," quietly remarked Kalnoy, "she refused to be my wife, as you know, but that gives no man the right to speak ill of her in my presence. I suppose I shall shortly receive a challenge from this fellow, as I believe he is a southern gentleman, even if he is a trader of women. In case I do, will you stand second?" Mr. Carlson declined to act in this capacity, and after having the unfortunate stranger removed endeavored, without success, to reason with the baron.

Challenge Received and Accepted.
An hour later a friend of the southerner appeared with a note demanding a meeting. Kalnoy at once accepted in a note which he sent to a friend then stopping at the Richelieu, and to whom the southerner's second was referred. Saturday night the baron was informed that all the details had been arranged, and that the meeting would take place at Jackson park at daybreak yesterday morning. The weapons selected being rapier. At 4 o'clock yesterday morning the baron entered a waiting carriage and was immediately joined by his second. On arrival at Jackson park they found the opposite party. Favorable fighting ground being found, at 6:10 the adversaries faced each other, sword in hand, and bared to their shirts.

Life Had No Charms for Him.
Saturday night, after the details of the duel had been arranged, Kalnoy expressed to Mr. Carlson the intense satisfaction he felt at the programme for the morrow. If he had the luck to fall, he said, his opponent's blade would but take the place of a weapon in his own hand, as his wild life had caused him to be disowned by his family, and suicide alone remained for one without home or love. The baron settled his bill, left word that if he did not survive all his belongings at the hotel were to be sent to the woman for whose honor he had fought, and quietly retired to bed.

THE ASSAULT AT ARMS.
The Austrian Cool, the Southerner Frenzied—Tragic Outcome.
The word was given and, like a flash, the southerner commenced the attack, though with a frenzy which prevented skill. There were lightning passes in every fencing movement. Kalnoy guarded and parried every pass with skill, but careless grace. The southerner at last made a supreme effort, and succeeded in inflicting a slight wound in the right leg of the baron. The seconds at once rushed forward and ordered the combat to cease. Kalnoy, however, insisted that the wound was too insignificant to cause even a delay. After a few moments of well-executed play the baron made a clever lunge which pricked the skin on the right shoulder of his adversary.

Fell on His Adversary's Sword.
The latter, however, parried admirably, and at this moment, to the horror of the seconds, the baron appeared to slip and literally to fall on the point of his adversary's sword, which entered his neck. A stream of blood gushed from the wound. The southerner turned ghostly pale, and the seconds at once stopped the combat. Baron Kalnoy was assisted to the adjoining knoll and his wound hastily dressed. After ascertaining that the result would not necessarily be fatal the southerner and his friend left the field.

The Mysterious Southerner.
Every effort to identify this man has failed. With the exception of Kalnoy he appears to have been unknown to all concerned. His appearance, however, lends to the belief that he is the son of a prominent citizen of Atlanta, Ga. He is known to have boarded the Cincinnati train on the "Big Four," which left the Hyde Park station at 9:45, two hours after the termination of the combat. Baron Kalnoy's exact whereabouts is kept secret, but unless he was able to go east last night he is still at the residence of the attending physician or of friends in Hyde Park.

Will Suicide Be the Next?
Manager Carlson, of the Richelieu, while deeply regretting the affair, and annoyed that it should have become known, is assured that the young Austrian has been well cared for, and that his life is not in immediate danger. From the conversation with him noted above he fears that the baron's mislay was not a mere accident, but that, flailing himself facing one not his equal in swordsmanship, he took that means of honorably ending his life. If that was the case Mr. Carlson fears that Kalnoy may follow the failure of this meeting by a successful attempt upon his own life.

LATER.—It has been learned that the alleged mysterious man was not a southerner, but a man named Rand, of Carlsbad, Bohemia. Also that the baron did not fall on his adversary's sword. Both men were wounded, the baron in the leg and Rand in the arm. Rand is at the Richelieu, but Kalnoy's whereabouts is unknown. The fight towards the last was very fierce, and both duellists were the recipients of a number of slight wounds, the baron having the best of it.

Arnold, engineer on the West Shore Ry., at Canajoharie, New York.

Sudden Deaths.
Heart disease is by far the most frequent cause of sudden deaths, which in the case of four cases is unsuspected. The symptoms are not generally understood. These are a habit of lying on the right side, short breath, pain or distress in side, back or shoulder, irregular pulse, asthma, weak and hungry spells, wind in stomach, swelling of ankles or dropsy, oppression, dry cough and smothering. Dr. Miles illustrated book on Heart Disease, free at Tillson & Hayden's, Dixon, Ill., who sell and guarantee Dr. Miles unequalled Nerve Heart Cure, and his Restorative Nerve which cures nervousness, headache, sleeplessness, effects of drinking, etc. It contains no opiates.

A LITTLE BATTLE IN SOUTH AFRICA

In Which British Police Are Successful Over Big Odds—Lisbon Talking War Again—English Preparing to Welcome a Chief Who Is Tired of the Portuguese—A Man of His Word—Sad Death of Lord Romilly—Snubbed by a Princess.

LONDON, May 25.—Lord Randolph Churchill cables to The Graphic from Capetown that on May 12 an encounter took place at the rear of Massikese, between the Portuguese and the British South Africa company's police. The Portuguese numbered about 250 Europeans and 500 natives with four guns. The British numbered sixty with one gun. The Portuguese were repulsed with seven killed and more wounded. It is believed that the Portuguese, having occupied Massikese, which was found evacuated, marched on Umtassa, where the fight occurred.

War Feeling in Lisbon.
This news has caused much excitement both in London and Lisbon. A dispatch from the latter city states that the war feeling is again uppermost, and that the people are clamoring for revenge upon the British South Africa company. This for the moment has diverted attention from the financial crisis, which makes it impossible for Portugal to make any formidable warlike demonstration.

Doesn't Like the Portuguese.
The English authorities are preparing to give a stunning reception to the two emissaries from the powerful African king, Gungunhana, whose territories lie chiefly within the bounds claimed by Portugal. Gungunhana asks for British protection, and declares that he wants nothing to do with the Portuguese. He is brother-in-law to Lebanga, king of Matabels, who sent a similar embassy to England some time ago, and was astonished at the report brought back of the glories of Windsor castle and London.

Had to Bake Somebody.
He would not believe them and ordered them to be baked alive, from which fate they were saved by an English missionary, who convinced the king that they told the truth. The missionary was horrified to learn later on that the king had caused two of his slaves to be subjected to the fate intended for his emissaries, on the ground that, having given his word, somebody must perish.

LORD ROMILLY SUFFOCATED.
Tragic End of the Scion of a Distinguished British Family.

LONDON, May 25.—A tragical fire occurred here on Saturday night. At midnight on that night Lord William Romilly was in his drawing room at his London town house, 2 Covington Gardens, S. W., when he accidentally upset a paraffin lamp, causing a blaze which set fire to the apartment. Lord Romilly attempted in vain to extinguish the flames, which spread, causing a suffocating smoke. His lordship was overcome by the smoke and sank senseless to the floor.

Two Servants Lose Their Lives.
The butler, smelling the smoke, rushed to the drawing room, where he found Lord Romilly helpless. He at once pulled his lordship out of the room, and aroused by his cries the other servants. An alarm of fire was given, and engines hurried to the scene, and soon extinguished the flames. The firemen entering the house, found two of the servants, Blanche Griffin, the house-maid, and Emma Lovell, the cook, both senseless. Lord Romilly was removed to St. George's hospital, but all attempts to bring him to life failed. Both the servants named were already dead when carried to the hospital.

A Fireman Badly Injured.
A fireman named George Byrne was seriously injured while assisting in the rescue of the inmates. Lord William Romilly was descended from the great jurist, Sir Samuel Romilly. His father also was an eminent lawyer. He was himself born in 1835. He leaves a widow, Lady Helen (Denison) Romilly, and a son by a former wife, John Gaspard Romilly, born in 1866.

Queen Vic's Granddaughter Does About the Right Thing at Moscow.
LONDON, May 25.—General Grezeser, prefect of police at Moscow, who has won an infamous notoriety by his severe execution of the order for the expulsion of Jews, was snubbed by the Princess Elizabeth, wife of the Grand Duke Sergius, on her arrival in Moscow last week. On the grand duke formally assuming command of the city the various officials were introduced to him and his wife. The grand duke treated Grezeser with the same gracious consideration that he extended to other officers, but the granddaughter of Queen Victoria looked in another direction when he bowed profoundly before her. Englishmen are proud of and Jews are delighted with her action.

Rather a Remarkable Case.
INDIANAPOLIS, May 25.—Arthur Wilson, 80 years old, was called before Judge Woods Saturday to be sentenced for impersonating an officer. Four men had identified him as the man who committed the offense on Aug. 27, 1890. Wilson stated that he was convicted of forgery at Logansport in February, 1885, and sentenced to prison for one year, and that he was not released until Nov. 6, 1890. The court was so much impressed with his statement that sentence was suspended.

SUNSET IN THE FOG.

The cold gray fog of the winter day held sea and land in thrall. Silent the vessels at anchor lay. A spell was over all. The narrow lines of each vessel bound. The limit of their sphere. Beyond was naught but a world of sound—A world of doubt and fear.

From the yards the sails bedraggled hung. Bordered by drops of dew. Featherly mists from the halcyons flung. Like ghostly pennons flew. While the masthead pierced the misty gray. And vanished at the spars. The rattles seen but a step away. Were narrow prison bars.

But sudden a golden glamour stole, As through a tiny seam; It spread till the glory lit the whole, And lightened foam to beam. No shadow fell from the ray of light: The wind and sea were still; 'Twas then that the red sun sank from sight. Behind the distant hill.

We saw it not as the golden ray. Gave place to tints of rose. And the mists, no longer cold and gray, About us seemed to close. They closer grew as the rose light died. The mists took on their trown, And the gloom that came from either side. Told that the sun was down. —Flavel Scott Mines in Harper's Weekly.

Fastidious Speech.

How many people are there who pronounce any proportion of their words correctly, not merely by reason of clipping and mousing, but by ignorance of good usage? We find them everywhere, and they lay the accent on the first instead of on the second syllable of acculturate, for example; they pronounce the second syllable of acoustics, coo, instead of cow; they do not put the accent on the last syllable of adept, as they should do; they leave the u sound out of buoy; they pronounce duke with the sound of oo instead of with the simple long u, emphasize the first instead of the second syllable of enervate, and sound the t in often.

They are astonished to know that precedence has the accent on the second syllable, and placed on the last; that quay is called key; that ough is suf; that the z instead of the s sound is to be given in sacrifice, and the reverse in rise; that subtle and subtile are two different words; that the last syllable of tortoise is pronounced "tis" instead of "tus," that it should be used and not ust, and that it is not the "zoo," but the zo-ological gardens where one goes. It is quite time, we think, when we hear one of these talkers, for some of the fancy work and fancy studies of the day to be dropped, and a little hard work on the dictionary put in their place.—Harper's Bazar.

A Rattlesnake's Fangs.

You often hear of rendering a rattlesnake harmless by pulling out its fangs. Then, again, you read of cases where a serpent so treated has bitten persons fatally. The reason for this is that a poisonous snake is deprived only temporarily of its venomous powers by the extraction of the two incisors in the upper jaw, at the bases of which are the poison glands. Of course you know that the fangs are hollow, so that when the animal strikes the venom gushes through them into the flesh of the person struck. Now, by drawing the two teeth the snake may be rendered harmless for a few weeks, but after a short time the two teeth just behind the original fangs move up and take their places, making connections with the poison glands and thus becoming poison fangs as good and effective as the old ones.—Interview in Washington Star.

An Era of Elegant Phrase.

What has happened to the English tongue? Is not its simple vigor good enough to serve the needs of the present generation? What has become of all the undertakers, that they should be supplanted by "funeral directors"? Are the barbers extinct, that their business should be usurped by "tonsorial artists," and is there no occupation left in the world for the useful and respectable night shirt that the "slumber robe" should be marked down to cost in every shop window?—Greenfield Republican.

Indianapolis has a unique citizen in "Uncle Billy" Jackson, who is well known to western railroad men. He is an excellent official, but his real claim to distinction lies in the fact that he once insisted on having his salary of $3,000, which he received as treasurer of the old Union Railway company, reduced to $1,000. The directors of the road gave a reluctant consent and his salary was reduced as he requested.

One hundred and fifteen servants is a great number to do the work of one house, but that is the size of the staff of the Manhattan club, of New York, since it went into the Stewart mansion. Waiters there are paid forty-five dollars a month and board. This is more than the clubs used to pay, but the Manhattan set the figure, and the others have had to follow it.

Vaccination should be compulsory. Where it is voluntary tens of thousands of persons neglect it. In Berlin, under compulsory vaccination, deaths from smallpox are less than 2 per cent.; in Paris, under voluntary vaccination, they are nearly 29 per cent.

In your exercises avoid devoting too much time to one kind of work. Do not spend all your time, for instance, on the horizontal bar or on the parallel bars. What all would be gymnasts should strive for is a symmetrical development of their muscles.

People have learned how to make tea as well as to drink it. In its first stage one Englishman had it served up as greens, the water in which it was boiled thrown away.

BEWARE OF OPIATES.

The curse of this present day is undoubtedly the use of opiates. Every community has its opium eater. Most of these poor wrecks began by taking the drug to deaden pain. Before they knew it they were in the power of the insidious enemy and henceforth there was no escape. Many and many a poor victim owes his enthrallment to the opiate in the cough syrup that was given him childhood to relieve his malady. It has even been claimed that it is impossible to make a cough medicine without using an opiate. Reid's German Cough and Kidney cure has solved this problem. It does not contain a particle of opium or other poison. For sale by all druggist, 25 and 50 cents a bottle.

Turn to the right medicine, if you're a weak or ailing woman. It's Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. If you're overworked or "run-down," it builds you up; if you're afflicted with any of the distressing derangements and disorders peculiar to your sex, it relieves and cures. It improves digestion, invigorates the system, enriches the blood, dispels aches and pains, melancholy and nervousness, produces refreshing sleep, and restores flesh and strength. In the cure of all functional disturbances, weaknesses, and irregularities, it's guaranteed to give satisfaction, or the money is refunded. It does all that's claimed for it, or it couldn't be sold in this way. It is a legitimate medicine—not a beverage. (Continued from first page) SABBATH DAY AT OUR CHURCHES

What the Ministers had to Say.
UNIVERSALIST CHURCH.
 It was Children's Day at the stone temple on the corner of Second street and Hennepin avenue, and on the occasion the Rev. J. P. McLean discoursed from the text, Matthew xix:14, "Suffer little children, and forbid them not, to come unto me; for such is the kingdom of Heaven."
 The human heart in all ages of the world has gone out in tenderness towards little children. The sweetness of the face of the child in repose has called up visions of angels. The child has been the gift of the Father, and presents the emblem of innocence. The religion of Christ renews the devotion of care to the helpless infant. The kingdom of heaven or the rule of righteousness on this earth is likened unto the simple faith of a child. We are to accept the teachings of Christ. We are to enter now into this kingdom with all the faith and implicit confidence of a child.
 You notice that a child is confiding, trusting. It so continues until these powers have been abused by coarse deception.
 We will notice that Christ likens his kingdom to little children. This should put to shame the doctrine that holds a babe is totally depraved, and an object of wrath. It is not depraved, but in a state of innocence.
 The child contains the essentials of the future man. Its religious nature is easily operated upon for good. It is easily trained in the direction of righteousness.
 It is a duty incumbent upon the Christian church to exercise proper care in the religious training of the young. For ages the so-called church overlooked this matter. Now, on every side we see a healthy development of this work. All the churches are active and viewing with one another in this important matter. I am proud to say that the Universalist church has been active in this matter. John Murray, the founder of Universalism in America, early dedicated children to the service of the Father.
 In the year 1857, Rev. Dr. H. C. Leonard, now a professor in Tuft's Divinity School, but then pastor of the Universalist church in Chelsea, Mass., set apart one Sunday in the year, for a special service for Children. This movement soon became popular in our denomination. In 1867 the Universalist general convention, then in session in the city of Baltimore, adopted the following:

 "RESOLVED, That we commend the practice of those churches in our order that set apart one Sunday in each year as Children's Day, when parents bring to the altar their most precious treasures, and give them to the Lord by appropriate and sacred rites."
 The next session of the general convention was held in Providence, R. I., in 1868, when the following was adopted:
 "RESOLVED, That while it may be proper to dedicate children on any day of the year, uniformity of action is desirable in this as in all other matters, and we recommend that the second Sunday in June, of each year, be named and set apart as Children's Sunday."
 At the Centenary convention held in 1870, in Gloucester, Mass., the following was adopted as a part of the organic law of our church: "It shall be the duty of every Parish to set apart at least one Sunday in each year to be denominated Children's Sunday—in all cases where practicable the second Sunday in June, or as near thereto as possible; and parents and guardians shall be encouraged and invited to bring their children to the altar on that day for baptism or dedication to the service of the Lord."
 From the beginning of this rite the churches have been decorated with flowers, and often the bird's notes are mingled with songs of the children.
 The institution has become a pleasing and important addition to the services of church.
 There were exercises appropriate to Children's Sunday, participated in by the Sabbath school. The church was beautifully decorated. After the sermon nine adults were received into church membership, one by rite of baptism, and five children dedicated to the service of the Father.
PRESBYTERIAN CHURCH.
 At the Presbyterian church Rev. E. C. Sticksel preached a sermon which was a continuance of the line of thought of the Sabbath previous, viz: The "names" applied to the followers of Christ.
 First, "Disciples," Acts 11:26. Christ is the teacher, his followers scholars. He says "learn of me." He teaches our highest knowledge of God, our best knowledge of what man should be, our only knowledge of the future. Christ is our master, we serve with submission; obedience: "Ye are my disciples if ye keep my commandments."
 Second, "Believers," Acts 5:14, I Tim 14:12. Belief which is faith is higher than belief of the understanding. It has in it the moral demand of trust. Faith is the one thing that binds us to God and makes us Christians.
 Third, "Saint," Acts 9:13-32 and 31-10. The central idea of the word is not purity but separation, consecration.
 Fourth, "Brethren," 2 John 21:3. In Acts the term is applied at least thirty times and in the Epistles perhaps seventy-five times. We are brethren because we possess a supernatural life which has come from our Father. Any true Christian people are really nearer each other than any Christian and non-Christian. And yet how many professing Christians in their choice of friends and intimates ignore utterly Christian character.
AT ST. LUKE'S CHURCH.
 The Rev. H. C. Granger discoursed from the text St. Matthew 3:16-16:
 "And Jesus, when he was baptized, went up straightway out of the water, and lo! the heavens were opened unto Him and He saw the spirit of God descending like a dove and lighting upon Him. And lo! a voice from heaven saying, 'This is my beloved son in whom I am well pleased!'"
 The Rector took for his subject the "Trinity" in keeping with the idea of this Sunday; saying by way of preface that the doctrine of the "Trinity" does not rest upon any one isolated passage of the scriptures by way of a distinct statement, as that, for example, contained in the First Epistle of St. John, fifth chapter and seventh verse, which in the revision of the New Testament has been dropped, but is woven into the very texture of the word of God, from which it cannot be taken out without rending the whole. The phraseology of the text reveals three persons but one divine nature or essence. Some one has said that the Trinity is what we know about God; consequently thinking upon this declaration of the Trinity, as in proportion as we grasp its main thoughts, to that extent do we increase our knowledge of God. These thoughts center in the Man, the Dove and the Voice. First, the Man. The Son of God in becoming man entered into relationship with all the requirements laid down for man. As such one of these was to submit himself for Baptism. In so doing Jesus illustrates the manly spirit. He shrank from nothing that it was his duty to do. Manliness characterized his life from beginning to end. He has thereby left every Christian an example to be followed. Manly thoughts, purposes and acts. Manliness not for itself simply but because man was made in the image of God: in proportion therefore, as he is true to the principle in accordance with which he was created, does he grow into harmony with God; doing this he also comes to understand the Deity better; thus does what is said of man here, help to give a practical turn to the doctrine of the Trinity.
 Second. The dove is used as a symbol here, of the Holy Ghost's descent upon Jesus, in that swiftness which belongs to this bird in its flight. While gentleness is associated with the dove, this is not the idea here, God, the Holy Ghost, descends at times with a swift suddenness and a precision that indicates judgment. The experiences of Ananias and Sapphira substantiate this. They lied to the Holy Ghost and He struck them dead instantly; even as the dove in its flight, darts down from the sky. Follow this out and we are brought unto that side of God's nature too often forgotten to-day. His justice, though long delayed, it is sure to come, and swift in its final execution.

 Third. The voice, in that the Father was invisible, carries out the general conception of God, as revealed in the Scriptures. "No man hath seen God at any time." Invisible, spiritual, but real. Pleased with Christ, magnifying Him, whom we also are to glorify, serve and follow—manliness, justice, and invisibility; all belonging to God.
AT THE BAPTIST CHURCH.
 In the morning the pastor, the Rev. Fuller, preached from John xii:24: "Verily, verily, I say unto you, except a corn of wheat fall into the ground and die, it abideth alone; but if it die it bringeth forth much fruit."
 The desire to acquire and to possess is a characteristic of human nature. Man sets no limit to his acquisition. Some animals store up for future need, but they do not exceed a certain amount. Man, however, generally goes on acquiring or striving to acquire as long as he lives. Within reasonable limits this desire is legitimate. Men may rightfully strive to acquire fame, learning or money and our Saviour has given us a rule for the attainment of any kind of success. Generally speaking, if a man is to achieve success along a certain line, he must be dead to all things else; i. e., he must concentrate his energies and direct them in one particular path, and therefore other lines of activity must be for him as if they were not. The business man cannot be a man of pleasure and be a successful business man. He must be dead to pleasure. The student must die to all but his books if he will be pre-eminent as a scholar. This truth is especially applicable to the Christian's life. The faithful picture of a Christian is that of a man dead to the world and to everything not consistent with a Godly life. He must be dead to worldly pleasures if he will bring forth fruit to the glory of his master.
 The text inculcates self-denial. It is a reiteration in another form of the words of Christ upon another occasion "Ye cannot serve God and mammon." We must be willing to forego present pleasure for future good. Let us learn this lesson from nature, whence Christ took the analogy. Before the bountiful harvest shall reflect back the rays of the sun enriched with its own golden tints each seed must die that it manifest itself in a more abundant fruitage. Before the future can yield any generous return for us, we, too, in self-renunciation and sacrifice must "die" to all selfish pursuits.
COLLEGE NOTES.
 The entire college was electrified yesterday by the announcement that one of the wisest sages in the school had so far transgressed the limits of dignity as to go out walking with a young lady. He returned apparently none the worse for his debut.
 A number of couples attended the Luttman Sextette Concert Saturday evening.
 A memorial program will be given by the Vespera Saturday evening.
 The "Old-maid Quartette" dined at the Burhem restaurant to-day.
 The statement that school closes May 28th was a mistake; June 4th is the date.
 Prof. Neighbor relates some thrilling escapes from drowning on his surveying tour to the Inlet swamps Saturday. His usual buoyancy carried him through safely, however.
 Since last Saturday, Mr. Geo. Gibbs, of Brookville, has six sows which have sixty lively little pigs. Who can beat that?—Polo Visitor.

 Baby is sick.—The woeful expression of a Des Moines teamster's countenance showed his deep anxiety was not entirely without cause, when he inquired of a druggist of the same city what was best to give a baby for a cold? It was not necessary for for him to say more, his countenance showed that the pet of the family, if not the idol of his life was in distress. "We give our baby Chamberlain's Cough Remedy," was the druggist's answer. "I don't like to give the baby such strong medicine," said the teamster. "You know John Oleson, of the Watters-Talbot Printing Co., don't you? Inquired the druggist. "His baby, when eighteen months old, got hold of a bottle of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy and drank the whole of it. Of course it made the baby vomit very freely but did not injure it in the least, and what is more, it cured the baby's cold. The teamster already knew the value of the Remedy, having used it himself, and was now satisfied that there was no danger in giving it even to a baby. For sale by H. E. DONALDSON, Druggist.
